

Suppose that 1 out of a million people can live to be 5000 years old. (It's known at birth but random and non-genetic. They age normally until 18, then start aging at ~1.3% the normal rate.) How much would the existence of these people change society?

